READ THE FOLLOWING INSTRUCTIONS CAREFULLY.

1. This paper consists of SIX questions in TWO sections. Answer ALL questions.

2. Write your answers in the spaces provided in this booklet.

3. Do NOT write in the margins.

4. You may use a silent, non-programmable calculator to answer questions.

5. You are advised to take some time to read through the paper and plan your answers.

6. If you need to rewrite any answer and there is not enough space to do so on the original page, you must use the extra lined page(s) provided at the back of this booklet. Remember to draw a line through your original answer.

7. If you use the extra page(s) you MUST write the question number clearly in the box provided at the top of the extra page(s) and, where relevant, include the question part beside the answer.

DO NOT TURN THIS PAGE UNTIL YOU ARE TOLD TO DO SO.
1. (a) Table 1 summarizes the results of an experiment comparing the effect of temperature on two protease enzymes, one from a mammal that lives in the tropics and the other from a prokaryote living in hot springs. The enzyme activity is expressed as a percentage of its maximum efficiency.

(i) On the grid in Figure 1, plot the data in Table 1 for the mammalian protease as a line graph. [3 marks]

(ii) Using arrows labelled P1 and P2, indicate, on the x-axis of Figure 1, the temperature at which EACH protease enzyme functions at its maximum efficiency. What accounts for any difference observed? [3 marks]
(iii) Enzymes are mainly globular proteins. With reference to the levels of protein organization, explain the effect of temperature on the prokaryote protease between 75 °C and 90 °C.

(b) Figure 2 is an electron micrograph of a mammalian liver cell.

(i) Identify the organelles labelled I, II and III.

I: ...................................................................................................................

II: ...................................................................................................................

III: ...................................................................................................................

[3 marks]

(ii) If the actual size of the structure labelled Y is 1.5 μm, calculate the magnification of the electron micrograph in Figure 2.

Magnification: .................................................................................................

[1 mark]

(iii) Suggest a reason which may account for the extensive network of membranes seen in this type of animal cell.

5. (a) Explain what is meant by the term 'gene'. Outline the principles of using restriction enzymes to cut a gene from a length of DNA.

Note: Details of the steps involved in recombinant DNA technology are not required. [5 marks]
Gene therapy is the application of the principle of genetic engineering in the treatment of diseases.

(i) Give a brief description of one human disease for which the use of somatic gene therapy has been shown to be effective. [2 marks]
